Zev is an aging Navy SEAL who's fought for his country on three continents. Julian is an unemployed ex-prostitute with massive student debt and a chess obsession who plans to be president someday.

Ex-con Rey Vales gets cut up by a would-be mugger. The free clinic is open late and Dr. Lovely is even more lovely than his name suggests. It's a pity his temperament doesn't match his outward appearance.

In Case of Emergency

Kev Liang waits tables and occasionally deals coke at a trendy midtown restaurant. When a gunman breaks into the kitchen, he's surprised to find that his mild-mannered favorite customer (and secret crush) has some serious underworld connections.

A collection of three gay romance novelettes, two of which contain chess, two of which contain firefights, and all three of which contain explicit adult content.

Three different but great stories

By James Lee

All three shorts were good though my favorite was the last one . There's just something appealing about a guy happening to find not an HEA but a solid beginning just because he's a good guy. No fated or gay-for-you plot devices. Just a solid story about realistic but solid people. People you'd like to get to know...

Excellent!

By Rachel

Three really cute short stories. These are not the happiest of lives, but all the characters find something in their partners. An enjoyable read from an author with a strong grasp of character. If character driven romances are for you then this is the perfect book.

Excellent!

By Caitlin

I was instantly hooked with every character that arrived on the page. The differences among them, along with their similarities in cheekiness and always a bit of disbelief in their own circumstances, were a lot of fun.
