Unbelievable Plot!

By Manga Maniac Cafe

Laura Golightly is traveling around Europe, the assistant to a romance writer. Finding her employer, Mamie Pendergast, a demanding and self-centered woman, Laura is forced to smooth things over with people they meet, time and time again. When Mamie's hotel reservations for her favorite suite are lost, they have to settle for another room. When a cat burglar creeps into their suite, Laura is determined to save Mamie's manuscript. When he steals a kiss instead, Laura finds herself falling in love, and also into danger!

This was silliest book I've read in a while. The plot wasn't remotely plausible, from the president of an airplane design company stooping to cat burglary, to the muddled plot twist involving stolen blueprints and terrorist organizations. I found the idea of the army allowing a civilian to lead the charge to save the kidnapped heroine rather ridiculous, though Caesar did look rather fetching clutching a semi-automatic rifle...

The art saved this book. With crisp, graceful lines, it held my attention much better than the lame plot. The panel layouts complimented the story, and Mayu Kasumi used large images every effectively. If for no other reason, flip through this book to enjoy the gorgeous artwork!

Silly and not really worth your time

By Ryner

Working as a live-in personal assistant for an author, Laura is awakened one night by the sound of someone breaking into their hotel suite. When she yells for help, the masked burglar kisses her to keep her quiet, then leaves. Who is he and what was he looking for?

Laura is a pretty but empty-headed, naïve and self-deprecating - the most annoying kind of heroine(?). I picked this up because Madeleine Ker is the pseudonym of one of my favorite authors, Marius Gabriel. It was my first foray into graphic novels in which the book is read back to front, which made for an interesting experience but took some getting used to. Disappointingly, it confirmed my suspicion that pulp romance written by a talented author is still empty, unfulfilling, pulp romance, even when "printed in flirty pink ink!"
